What is anti-social behaviour

Anti-social behaviour (ASB) is defined as acting in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household.

Anti-social behaviour can include:

- noise;
- criminal damage and vandalism;
- drinking in the street;
- graffiti;
- littering.

Why we've created an anti-social behaviour pledge

We recognise that anti-social behaviour covers a complex range of activities that affects the quality of life for individuals, families and communities.

We are committed to tackling, not tolerating, anti-social behaviour. We will use the full range of powers and resources available, both civil and criminal to ensure that we take a vigorous approach to deal with those responsible, while providing effective support to victims, witnesses and the perpetrators.

We want every member of our community to feel confident that we are dealing robustly with anti-social behaviour and to enjoy their homes and neighbourhoods safely and peacefully.

- Acknowledge any dissatisfaction with the service you receive and investigate it fully.

Taking action

If anti-social behaviour is a problem for you, there's a lot you can do to help put a stop to it.

You can:

- talk to your neighbours to find out if they're affected as well;
- if you feel comfortable doing so, talk to the person causing the problem. They may not realise how it is affecting you;
- report the problem to the relevant organisation (see next page);
- tell your landlord or residents' association, if you are a tenant, about the situation
- attend a neighbourhood PACT meeting (Partners And Communities Together) – find out more at www.kent.police.uk or www.medwaycsp.co.uk

If the situation is an emergency (if someone's life or safety is threatened) phone 999.

All complaints are treated as confidential. You don't have to worry about your identity being revealed. It is helpful if you have specific details about what happened, when, where and how you were affected by it.
